A University-Wide Committee on Discrimination and Harassment concluded that DCF Sgt. Raymond "Ray" Rodriguez sexually harassed a female student in the fall of 2014, and then failed to provide a written disciplinary report to the Florida Department of Children and Families. The committee also concluded that Rodriguez was improperly recorded on his computer performing sexual acts with a student who had given him an unauthorized USB drive. The DCF, which fired Rodriguez in March, will also pay $46,778.22 in back pay and $26,443.26 in attorney's fees. The DCF investigation began in November 2014 after an anonymous email was sent to University of Florida Public Safety. University Security contacted the girl, who notified her mother and the DCF. The investigation confirmed that Rodriguez sexually harassed the student in September and October of 2014. ABC affiliate WTSP reported. Rodriguez's attorney, Robert DeGenio, said the DCF has run amok. He also said the investigation was tainted. "There was no evidence against him, and the investigation was compromised from the beginning by the career bureaucrats in the DCF," DeGenio told WTSP. "These kids wrote letters, described this conduct, called it sexual harassment, and they were ignored by these career bureaucrats," he said. The DCF fired Rodriguez immediately after the investigation concluded, according to DeGenio. An investigation by NBC News into the case found that no male students had filed complaints about Rodriguez. Rodriguez had been placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of the investigation. He had been assigned to the Orlando branch of the DCF since February 2012, according to his LinkedIn page. Rodriguez was rated as a successful officer in the DCF's evaluation system. ABC News' Charlotte Ditter and Olivia Price contributed to this report. 1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to electrodes for Nb.sub.3 Ga and Nb.sub.3 Ga-doped NbGa electrodes which are used for the deposition of Nb.sub.3 Ga thin film and are the candidates for the electrodes of a hot cathode.

2. Description of the Prior Art There are known the following methods for producing a hot cathode in such as an electron tube: (1) An Nb.sub.3 Ga-based hot cathode obtained by forming Nb.sub.3 Ga thin film on a cathode substrate of Si, SiC, aluminum nitride, silicon carbide or the like and thereafter oxidizing the film to cause the film to be in contact with an electron emitting source such as a tungsten filament. (2) An Nb.sub.3 Ga-based hot cathode obtained by forming Nb.sub.3 Ga thin film on a cathode substrate of Si, silicon carbide or the like and thereafter causing the substrate to be in contact with an electron emitting source such as a tungsten filament. (3) An Nb.sub.3 Ga-based hot cathode obtained by impregnating Nb.sub.3 Ga in preformed holes of a substrate made of a material such as sapphire, silicon carbide or the like to form a deposit 50b96ab0b6

Previously we described how an alloantigen expressed on MIs on the surface of thymocytes, could play a role in the deletion of positive selection of this antigen. In this paper we present data that MIs determinants seem to be recognized by two different types of thymic receptors; those that respond to MIs only, and those that recognize MIs plus foreign determinants. The first type of receptors seems to be an alloantigen-specific structure, since MIs are reciprocally deleted and foreign determinants can change their expression. The nature of the second type of receptor is difficult to define since we could not completely eliminate foreign determinants in the cross-reacting population. We think that our data support the hypothesis that MIs are recognized by auto-alloallogeneic, or semi-alloallogeneic receptors.
